

School Services School Guide for Online School

What is Online School in Texas?

Online School in Texas is a type of school that is done at virtually in your home. Students and teachers do not typically meet in person and these schools do not have a building they go to daily. Students will be required to attend classes virtually. In Texas, we have two types of online schools that students can attend, Free Public Online School and Tuition-based Online School. Children's HealthSM and The School Services Department do not recommend any of these school programs. This list is to provide families with information about online schools in Texas.

Types of Online School

Tuition-Based Online School

Tuition-Based Online Schools require families to pay a fee to participate in their program, like private school. There are many different options available for these types of online schools. Families need to be aware that some of these schools are not accredited. To help families get started with their school search, below is a list of accredited schools.

Free Public Online school

Free Public Online schools have received accreditation from Texas Education Agency (TEA) and are either connected to a school district or a Charter School. They are a part of the Texas Virtual School Network Online Schools (TXVSN OLS) program. TXVSN OLS provides full-time online instruction to eligible Texas public school students through enrollment in one of the TEA-accredited public school districts and open-enrollment charter schools approved to participate in the program. These free online public schools offer virtual instructional programs to students across the state. Students who enroll in one of the TXVSN online schools are public school students.
